Hongkone, June 15th, 1894. THE Siamese! Government have been wise in pocketing their dignity and surrendering PHRA Yor for punishment. It would have been suicidal on the part of the little kingdom to have provoked a conflict with France, even had she had a stronger case than she had. If the French insisted on the punishment of the accused there was no course left open to Siam but to yield to force majeure. And, as a matter of fact, Para You seems to have been guilty of oriental guile and trickery deserving of some punishment, though perhaps not a particularly severe one. He may have thought that the end justified the means, and he would no doubt further plead that he was goaded into the action he took by what he considered the annoyance and humiliation to which he was subjected; but the fact remains that GROSCURIN and his party were slaughtered. The Bangkok papers to hand contain the beginning of the trial, but the dates do not come up to its conclusion. The acle d'accusation, however, presents a strong case against PHEA Yor which it would be difficult to break down, for there had already been one trial at which all the available evidence had been sifted, and it was on that evidence that the acts d'accusation was mainly founded. GROSGURIN was told off, with a party of Annamite militiamen, to escort PHRA Youand his Siamese soldiers across the frontier; when getting towards the end of the journey PERA You sends to the nearest Siamese post for soldiers, and at the same time, as is alleged, one of his officers named Luang Angraks busies himself in spreading dumiging reports amongs the country people, whereupon Groscurin thought it necessary to place Luang Anukaks under rapid improvement will ensue. restraint. PHEA YOT, who had established ! his camp at some little distance from Gro-BGURIN'S, having received reinforcements since the beginning of the month from the Sumese side, went to the house where the Erench officer was staving to demand the rolease of LUANG ANUBAKS, taking with him a number of armed men. Up to this point there is no material dispute as to the facts of the case; the conflict of evidence begins on the question of who shot first. According to the case for the prosecution hostilities were commenced by PREA Yor, while according to the defence it was GROSGURIN who opened fire. penal servitude. is not at present required. The landlords are entitled to full consideration: the anathy with which the state of affairs that existed was so long regarded by the authorithies and which may be styled contributory nogligonce, is in a large degree their justification for not having altered that state. Still they must, of course, endure their share of the loss inflicted on their property by the act of God following as a consequence on neglect of sanitary necessities. I will sketch at an little length as possible the lines on which I consider that action should he taken as to the two first points mentioned. The houses in these districts have been built by Chinese for Chinese; they are not sanitary, as we have sad proof; but can they not be made so without any such drastic measures as wholesale resumption and destruction? I think they can to a very great extent, and that a little calm consideration of the buildings as they stand would show that the course which I now indicate would give the desired result with much less expenditure and loss. All drains inside the houses, whether above o inder the ground, should be entirely removed disinfeefants being freely used. The houses should then be fumigated and examined to see how far the timber may be allowed to remain; it is probable that in most cases it would be found that the roofs might remain, but that all, er a large portion, of the floors, No., should be destroyed. The walls should be thoroughly broomed down, and no doubt some pointing would be here and there desirable. This being done, the earth inside the house should be duc-

I believe that this rifle meeting if not the first of its kind is at all events the first of what I hope is destined to be a long series of annual contests in which two at least, and I hope more, units will compate. The old established Artillery Battery has shown in these contests that it is still in vigorous health, and I am very pleased to see the young Maxim Company come so well to the front. On looking over the programme it struck me that there was not quite so much competition as between units as I should like to see, and that with the exception of the volley firing, it is rather too much confided to individual competition. There. is, for instance a contest for the championship ship in the Company; but though that one of the two Chempions who obtains the highest scere is said to have won for himself the proud mandarin accused of the murder of Inspector title of Champion of the Volunteer Corps for Grosgarin, was commenced at Bangkok on the ly the fusilade began, and the fire broke

There he met, by chance he has dared to say in his dechration, the Siameso troops coming from Outhone, at the head of which he hastened to march o Keng Chee.

The explanation of this pretended chance is found in a document produced at the first trial and of which the importance dominates the whole case. Two days after the departure from Cammon, the 28th May; the accused Phra Yot addressed, in fact, to the "Stamese authorities a pressing appeal of which the terms give an exact been exactly ascertained, but is believed to be unimated him form this moment towards the small French escort which accompanied him On the 8th inst. a junk plying between Canton to protect him. This fact constitutes an act of treason, and suffices in itself alone to condemn him who has committed it. It was, besides on the receipt of this letter that the mandarin at Outhers, Lung Vicht, sent two detachments in the direction of Kengchee which joined the forces of Phra Yot at Vien-Krasens. The written instructions, allough not signed, which may be read on the sick of the doorment, and the declaration of the officer Nai Thuy, who made allusion to the conents, communicated to him of this order, before To heroes of an Iliad ne left Outhers, leave no doubt on this point. We now come to the day of the attentat: In the morning of June 5th, the small troop of Para Yot, reinforced by the two detachments uder Nai Tour and Nai Plek, retook the road to Keng Chec. This force, based on the declarations of the Siamese officers, may be put
